About the CHILDREN'S CARDIOMYOPATHY FOUNDATION

The Children's Cardiomyopathy Foundation (CCF) is a national non-profit organization dedicated to finding causes and cures for pediatric cardiomyopathy. Cardiomyopathy is the leading cause for sudden cardiac deaths and heart transplants in children under age 18.

CCF started in 2002 with one family's determination to call attention to this poorly understood heart disease and to take action on the lack of medical progress and public awareness. Since then, CCF has grown into a global community of families, physicians and scientists focused on improving diagnosis, treatment and quality of life for children affected by cardiomyopathy.

CCF is involved in all aspects of the disease from research and education to patient support, awareness and advocacy. The Foundation has made great strides in bringing together experts from the medical and scientific fields to advance knowledge on pediatric cardiomyopathy and in developing support services for those affected by this chronic disease.

Nearly $1 million has been committed to research and treatment initiatives in the U.S. and Canada, and CCF has led the way in establishing a biologic specimen repository and planning the first international scientific conference. In the process, CCF has worked with many esteemed organizations, including the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, American Heart Association and the National Organization for Rare Diseases.

CCF continues to be an invaluable lifeline to affected families providing information, resources and guidance. CCF's educational materials are now distributed to more than 70 hospitals in North America.

The Foundation's hope for the future is that more lives will be saved, and every affected child will have a chance to live a full and active life.
